Translator course now at FJ

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

A program that gives Soldiers invaluable skills in the Global War on Terrorism is now permanently located at Fort Jackson.

The transition of the Language Training Detachment 09L Program instructors from operating as a mobile training team headquartered at the Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center, at the Presidio of Monterey in California, to a permanent cadre of instructors stationed at Fort Jackson was made official July 19 during a ceremony.

“This is a remarkable achievement for Fort Jackson,” said John McLaurin, deputy assistant secretary of the Army for human resources. “The new interpreter and translator program here is a one-stop shop for 09L.”

So far 90 Soldiers have graduated from the program at Fort Jackson and 200 are currently in training or getting ready for training.

The Army 09L Combat Interpreter-Translator Program was implemented July 8, 2003 for native and heritage speakers of designated strategic languages of interest to the Army. Thus far, Soldiers with Arabic, Dari, Pashto, Sorani, Urdu and Farsi skills have graduated from the program.

“According to commanders in theater, 09L are force multipliers. They are actually saving lives in Iraq and Afghanistan,” he said. “It is incredible what the 09L are able to accomplish for Americans and all Iraqis.”

Recruits in the program must demonstrate language proficiency in both the target language and in English.

Soldiers recruited into the program enter the six-week combat interpreter-translator course at Fort Jackson after completing Basic Combat Training.

The intensive 09L Advanced Individual Training course provides these Soldiers with the interpretation and translation skills to

Reenlistment NCOs top information source

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

For Soldiers looking to reenlist or find out more about their options, their one, sure-fire source of information isn't necessarily the Internet or the rumor mill.

It is an Army career counselor. Multiple factors are considered when determining what a Soldier qualifies for. Years in service, Military Occupational Specialties, and bonus zones are among the considerations.

Sgt. 1st Class Mark Kirkland, 171st Infantry Brigade senior career counselor, said he understands how Soldiers become misinformed.

“I think rumors are something you'll always have,” he said. “Soldiers will get an Army Times and read an article, and mix up an enlistment bonus with a reenlistment bonus. Sometimes they'll read something the Army's about to do, but hasn't done yet. It's just them trying to be proactive.”

Another factor to consider is Army policy.

“A lot of times, to adjust to changes, we'll have policy letters come down that will make exceptions on a case-by-case basis,” he said. “Each individual Soldier is different even though they may think, ‘hey, my buddy got this so I should get this, too.’”

When considering bonuses, there are three zones of eligibility. They are:

Alpha Zone: Soldiers with 17 months of continuous Active Federal Service, but no more than six years.

Bravo Zone: Soldiers with at least six - but not more than 10 - years of AFS.

Charlie Zone: Soldiers who have at least 10 - but not more than 14 - years of AFS.

Soldiers can only receive one bonus in each zone, and must typically reenlist for at least three years to be eligible for these bonuses.

Kirkland said there are a couple of ways for Soldiers wishing to reenlist with a new MOS to do so. For initial-term Soldiers, there is Option Three, Army Training. For mid-term Soldiers, the BEAR (Bonus Extension And Retraining) Program allows Soldiers to sign an extension contract for a minimum of 24 months after the Soldier completes Advanced Individual Training.

Kirkland said Soldiers have 90 days from that point to reenlist and receive the bonus that comes with the BEAR Program. “This is an excellent program because it is a list of critically understrengthened

Hemp seed products; bowling on-post

Q Why is it illegal to use hemp seed oil products?

A According to Army Regulation 600-85, studies have shown that products made with hemp seed oil may contain varying levels of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), an active ingredient of marijuana which is detectable under the Army Drug Testing Program.

To ensure military readiness, the ingestion

Rescued animal can become best friend

Kristen Marquez
DA Intern

He was found in the middle of Interstate 40, somewhere in rural Oklahoma. A tiny, curled-up mess of a puppy, weak and virtually hairless, malnourished and terrified.

The family who picked him up was in the middle of a cross-country move and saw him on their way through Oklahoma. They brought him to Oklahoma City, turned him over to Sooner Golden Retriever Rescue, and that's where I come in.

As a volunteer for SGRR, I was fostering one golden in need of a home. They needed a quiet place for this puppy to recuperate and heal. "He's a mix, so he might not get a home right away, but he is a puppy, and they usually get adopted quickly," I was told. SGRR usually only rescues purebreds but there were no other options — If SGRR couldn't take him, he was going to be put to sleep.

That was last spring. Here we are, more than a year later, after a cross-country move of our own, and of course, the little guy is still with me. He's my Scout, my little guard dog, and I'm so thankful every day that he was given a second chance at life.

Scout, despite his rough first few months, is one of the lucky ones. He was blessed by some guardian angels that cared enough to pull over and pick him up, even though it was late at night and they had no room in their car. He was blessed by a soft-hearted SGRR president who met the family at the emergency vet clinic and, even knowing the pup was definitely not a golden, saw the wagging tail and pleading eyes and knew he couldn't let him be destroyed because he was a mix. In return, I have been blessed with a buddy who enjoys tearing up toys, growling at strange noises in the middle of the night and going for long walks with me at Hilton Field. The little guy became my shadow within days of coming home with me. Even today, I can't leave the room without him hopping up and following me. His devotion is unmatched.

Unfortunately, thousands more each year are not as lucky. The Humane Society of the United States estimates that six to eight million cats and dogs enter shelters each year. Sadly, an estimated three to four million of those are euthanized.

Only about 30 percent of dogs and 2 to 5 percent of cats are reclaimed by their owners from shelters each year. There is nothing wrong with these animals. In fact, roughly 25 percent of those dogs are purebred.

Each week, a Leader reporter heads over to the post vet clinic to take pictures of the pets newly available for adoption. There is always at least one. If you are looking for a pet, I urge you to check the vet clinic, go to a local shelter or find a rescue group for a particular breed of animal you are interested in. Rescue groups are easy to find, easy to work with and sometimes have fanatics like me available to bring your new pet to you.

Just keep in mind that adopting a pet is a lifelong commitment. You can't get a cute one now, and then leave it here when it's time to PCS. Do your research and think it through, but I guarantee if you take a stroll through the shelter you'll also find some pleading eyes and a new companion who knows you saved their life.

Both of my dogs are rescued, and I wouldn't trade them for anything. Noel is my 'real' golden, also adopted from SGRR, and she's as beautiful as they come. I can't take her anywhere without someone stopping us along the way to comment on how beautiful she is. Imagine their surprise when I tell them she was pulled from a shelter and adopted to me by a golden retriever rescue.

The truth is, yes, you can get wonderful dogs (and cats) from rescue groups and animal shelters. My home will always be filled with pets, and my pets will always be rescued.

ROTC 5th Brigade arrives at Fort Jackson

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

After some delays, the Army ROTC 5th Brigade Headquarters is finally moving into its new home at 4356 Hardee Ave.

The foundation for its new building was laid in November, but it wasn't until March that construction actually began. Four months later, the outside is complete and the nine-member staff is organizing the inside of the building.

The brigade moved to Fort Jackson from Fort Bragg, N.C., last year as part of the U.S. Army Cadet Command restructuring.

They went from four regional commands to two. With that realignment the brigades saw a shift in their areas of responsibility.

"We used to cover the Carolinas and part of Virginia," said Lt. Col. Tony Seyfried, the brigade's executive officer. "Now we are responsible for ROTC programs in all of South Carolina and Tennessee, one in North Carolina (Appalachian State University) and one in Georgia (Augusta State University)."

The only ROTC program physically in their area of responsibility they do not oversee is The Citadel.

"They (Cadet Command) have taken all the senior military colleges such as The Citadel and Virginia Military Institute and put them directly under regional control because of the schools' size," explained Seyfried. "Those programs are commanded by colonels, whereas the other battalions (schools ROTC programs) are commanded by lieutenant colonels. They felt there was some conflict there that could be resolved by having the senior military schools report directly to the regional headquarters."

sioning two out of every three new lieutenants, Seyfried said the realignment, along with the goal of increasing the number of cadets trained every year from 4,500 to 5,350 over the next four years, puts more of a strain on the cadre at the schools.

"They started the realignment to improve the business practices of the Cadet Command, to try to gain greater efficiencies in operations. But greater efficiencies means reducing the number of people (assigned to the Cadet Command) so you can save slots for elsewhere in the military. It is counterproductive to producing more lieutenants when it takes one cadre for every three cadets," he said.

Of the cadre spread throughout the 5th Brigade, Seyfried has high praise for them.

"Our cadre makes the difference, especially at private schools where students in the (ROTC) program don't need the money," he said.

"The influence they have with the students is what really makes the difference in attracting and keeping students."

Once a semester, the brigade's sergeant major has the opportunity to visit each battalion and meet with the cadre and cadets.

He agrees with Seyfried's assessment of the cadre and is optimistic about the Army's future leadership.

"I talk to captains and majors and ask them to compare themselves to the cadets now," said Sgt. Maj. Earnest Washington. "They say, 'they are much more versatile than what we were. They are motivated and they are better educated.'"

Well-Being Corner

Continuing to improve FJ customer service

Christina Garza
AFAP Coordinator

The DoD Interactive Customer Evaluation system continues to shape the future of customer service and your well-being through technology.

The interactive Web site allows customers to submit direct and immediate feedback to facility managers about their products and services. Since October, ICE has maintained a customer satisfaction rating of 95 percent across Fort Jackson.

With just the click of a mouse, the system sends comments, suggestions, complaints or compliments directly to the appropriate service provider manager for action. If a phone number and/or e-mail address are included, a manager will contact the submitter directly with a reply if requested. However, submission can be made anonymously. All you need is an Internet browser to access the ICE system from any computer, any time and any place.

Log on to <http://ice.disa.mil/>, click on Army CONUS, and then click on Fort Jackson — you're there! You can also access the site by using the Fort Jackson

Web site at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/> scroll down and click on the ICE logo. Choose the appropriate category from the list and click on the info icon to see service provider information such as hours of operation, phone numbers and upcoming events. Click on the service provider link to access the customer comment card and submit comments.

Service provider managers will use the feedback to continuously review, improve and provide the highest quality service possible. The system automatically calculates the customer service rating each week and reports trend data as well. These reports are provided to the garrison command group and the supervisors responsible for each service provider area.

ICE is sponsored by the Office of the Secretary of Defense Quality Management Office and is part of the Fort Jackson Customer Management Services initiative.

The primary purpose of ICE is to improve customer service; give the leadership timely information about service quality; and to improve the speed, quality, and quantity of feedback from customers.

Customer input can range in areas of health, housing, recreation, family programs, shopping, administration, dining, communications, safety and security, travel and transportation. ICE provides another avenue for customers to voice their opinion on what they like, what they dislike and to suggest improvements to facility managers.

If you have any questions concerning the ICE system, please contact ICE site administrator for Fort Jackson at 751-5547/3425 or by e-mail at ice@jackson.army.mil

ICE Appreciation

The garrison would like to congratulate the Directorate of Human Resources, and the Directorate of Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security, specifically the Personnel Automation Work Center and the G-3 Security Division. FDA warns of botulism in certain chili

Lori Yerdon
U.S. Army Combat Readiness Center

FORT LEE, Va. - The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is warning consumers not to eat certain brands of hot dog chili sauce listed in a July 18 voluntary recall because of possible botulism contamination.

Food safety officials at the Defense Commissary Agency said that DeCA carries two of the 10 product brands mentioned - Castleberry Hot Dog Chili Sauce UPC 03030000101 and Castleberry Chili with Beans UPC 030300001015.

The voluntary recall by the Castleberry Food Company lists products with "best by" dates of April 30, 2009 through May 22, 2009. "Best by" dates are found on the can lids:

- Castleberry Hot Dog Chili Sauce - 10-ounce can - UPC: 3030000101
- Castleberry Chili with Beans - 15-ounce can - UPC: 30300 01015
- Castleberry's Barbecue Pork - 10-ounce can - UPC: 30300 00402
- Austex Hot Dog Chili Sauce - 10-ounce can - UPC: 3030099533.
- Kroger Hot Dog Chili Sauce - 10-ounce can - UPC: 1111083942
- Bunker Hill Chili no Beans - 10-ounce can - UPC: 75266 04112
- Cattle Drive Chili with Beans - 15-ounce can - UPC: 30300 01515
- Meijer Corned Beef Hash - 15-ounce can - UPC: 1250 95229

• Morton House Corned Beef Hash - 15-ounce can - UPC: 75266 65830

• Southern Home Corned Beef Hash - 15-ounce can - UPC: 07880 15360

Botulism can be fatal. According to the FDA, two children in Texas and an Indiana couple who ate these products became seriously ill and have been hospitalized.

Individuals who show these symptoms and who may have recently eaten the affected products should seek immediate medical attention.

Symptoms of botulism poisoning can begin from six hours to two weeks after eating food that contains the toxin. Symptoms may include double vision, blurred vision, drooping eyelids, slurred speech, difficulty swallowing, dry mouth, and muscle weakness that moves progressively down the body, affecting the shoulders first then descending to the upper arms, lower arms, thighs, calves, etc.

Botulism poisoning can also cause paralysis of the breathing muscles which can result in death unless assistance with breathing (mechanical ventilation) is provided.

Commissary patrons who have any of these products at home should stop using it, empty the contents in the trash, take the product label off the can and return the label to the store from which they purchased it for a full refund. Castleberry recommends calling 1-888-203-8446 for any questions about this recall.

Consumers can also call the FDA at 1-888-SEAFOOD for updates.

Know the relationship between credit, security clearances

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

Be upfront and honest about your finances.

That's the advice from James Holley, security manager, Directorate for Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security, to Soldiers and civilians when they are filling out an SF 86 (Questionnaire for National Security Positions).

Whether it is an initial background investigation to allow computer access or a more detailed investigation for a security background, undisclosed financial problems can be a major obstacle.

"The most common problem that we see is not that someone has financial problems, most of the time it's that they don't want to reveal it," Holley said. "Normally, after someone brings in their packet, we'll look it over and give them a second chance to disclose any problems. Most of the time it's when they don't want to tell us everything that gets us into a problem situation."

Granting computer access is determined at the local level, while security clearance investigations are handled by the Army's Central Clearance Facility.

When it comes to financial issues, Holley said there is not a difference in the scope of the investigation depending on type of clearance, or whether the person is military or a civilian.

"We have the same standard for secret and top-secret clearances," he explained. "There are 13 security guidelines we follow, with one of them just stating financial issues."

Holley did say he sees a difference in the type of financial problems Soldiers and civilians face.

"With civilians we see more bankruptcies, whereas on the military side we see a lot of delinquent accounts," he said.

When someone has a bankruptcy in their financial past, Holley said if it has been discharged and there is paperwork to confirm the discharge his office can go ahead and grant the interim clearance. For those with delinquent accounts, several factors figure into whether to grant the interim clearance - number, amounts, whether they've been satisfied and if a payment plan has been set-up.

"It (payment plan) could be the deciding factor.

The investigator will look at everything and see that the individual is trying to square away their financial issues," Holley said.

"Ten dollars is better than zero. Show us six months where have been paying on that debt."

For those with delinquent accounts, Holley does recommend working with Army Community Service's Financial Relief Program rather than an outside agency.

ACS FRP offers free individual financial counseling and assistance with debt liquidation for those who find themselves in financial trouble. All counseling and debt liquidation services are confidential unless a Soldier is referred by the unit commander.

A quick check of your credit reports can help determine if there are any issues that need to be addressed. A free copy of your report can be obtained online once every 12 months from each of the nationwide consumer credit reporting companies — Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. All three can be accessed on the Web at www.annualcreditreport.com.

Holley warns to keep your finances in check, because starting this year a clearance can be revoked in the future because of increased financial problems.

"If you're granted a clearance after the initial investigation shows credit issues you'll be issued a warning with your security clearance," he said. "Then if down the road you have even more credit issues they will pull your security clearance. You should be thinking, 'I know I had these problems, they're giving me a chance, I have to keep my debts in control.'"

MOSs," he said.

"So, the Army says if Soldiers are willing to go into one of these MOSs, they'll get a bonus, whereas with Option Three, there is no bonus."

Sgt. Maj. Richard Jones, Fort Jackson command career counselor, said there is a new program, the Selective Reenlistment Bonus — Enhanced Program, available to Soldiers in more than 100 MOSs with an Expiration Term of Service date of Sept. 30, 2008 or earlier.

While in effect now, the message states it is subject to expire anytime prior to October 1, 2007 "without prior notice."

"This is a bonus program where however many years you enlist for, it tells you specifically what amount of money you're going to get," he said. "There are no fancy formulas that go to the finance office; they don't have to sit down and figure anything out."

Jones said this program is sort of a "pilot program" to implement a tiered bonus program planned for next fiscal year. He said with that plan, the sooner a Soldier reenlists upon hitting his or her reenlistment window — 24 months from ETS — the bigger the bonus.

He said that though Fort Jackson's retention rates have risen because of the message, the most important thing is keeping Soldiers informed.

"This is not to twist the Soldier's arm, just to let them know that the bonuses may not be there tomorrow," Jones said. "The biggest thing here is not necessarily how many Soldiers reenlist — the numbers on a piece of paper — but making sure they have the information they need to make an informed decision."

Kirkland agrees.

"Without a doubt, come see us," he said. "If a Soldier has all the information, he will do what's right for him and his family."

TRICARE offers assistance with settling medical debts

Col. James Mundy

Q I am a TRICARE beneficiary and I keep getting a medical bill from a collection agency and I am afraid my credit will be ruined. Who should I contact for help?

A TRICARE beneficiaries should contact the debt collections assistance officer at the nearest military treatment facility for assistance if they receive a notice from a collection agency or a negative credit report as a result of a medical or dental bill. The DCAO will research TRICARE claims and help beneficiaries understand the reason for the debt.

Beneficiaries must bring or submit documentation associated with a collection action or copy of their credit report to the DCAO.

This includes the debt collection letter, the TRICARE Explanation of Benefits statement and any medical or dental bills from the requesting provider. The more information that can be provided, the faster it will be to determine the cause of the problem.

The DCAO will research claims with the appropriate claims processor, contact the collection agency, hospital and doctor's office and provide the beneficiary with an explanation of how to resolve the collection problem.

Because of the Privacy Act, an authorization for disclosure of information must be signed for the DCAO to research any debt related information.

The DCAO does not have the authority to provide legal advice or fix credit ratings; however, they can assist beneficiaries through the debt collection process by providing them with the appropriate documentation for the collection or credit reporting agency.

TRICARE beneficiaries who have not been turned over to a collection agency, but who are receiving medical bills from a doctor's office, hospital or any other medical related source should contact a TRICARE beneficiary counseling and assistance coordinator for help. The BCAC's primary role is to help beneficiaries understand and utilize their TRICARE benefits and assist them with claims.

Autocraft hosts 2nd Annual Car, Bike Show

Theresa O'Hagan

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

Approximately 45 car and bike enthusiasts displayed their prized possessions Saturday at the second annual Autocraft Car and Bike Show. Everyone got to brag a little, answer questions, and share ideas with other enthusiasts.

A lucky few got to take home the top honors.

Autocraft Shop Manager Kenneth "Fletch" Fletcher was pleased with the turnout of competitors and spectators. This year was the second time the Autocraft Shop hosted a car show and the first time it include motorcycles. "It is a good opportunity to show the community what the shop has to offer and everything we do to support Soldiers and their Families," Fletcher said.

Some eye-catching vehicles included a navy blue 1954 Ford Pickup, a T-Rex, a 41 Ford T-Bucket and a 1974 Volkswagen Camper Van imported from Germany.

"I did all the work myself ... I'm still not done," said Stephen Gumla, who was participating in the show for the first time. He purchased the camper van in October of 1998.

The top camper mount did not work, the entire rear end had to be replaced, the bottom panel of the side door had to be rebuilt and the windshield had to be replaced, just to name a few improvements.

"The engine was in pieces in the trunk," Gumla said. He has driven his Camper Van all over Europe and still uses it for camping trips. Roger Garcia, also a first timer, was showing his heavily customized 1998 Corvette. "I think I am the only one here with two full pages of customizations," he said. "Everything from a custom interior to engine modifications makes for a head turning ride. And horsepower? It gets between 396-398 horsepower."

Corvettes and Mustangs of various years, as well as custom trucks, a Mini Cooper, Hondas and various styles of motorcycles made for a well rounded show.

"It's a nice car show. I like the Hyabusa motorcycles and the T-Rex," said Logan Opsahl, family member. "The Lotus was pretty cool, too."

Cases of the Week

Military Police noticed blood on the driver’s side door handle and a strong alcoholic odor coming from a civilian’s vehicle. The MPs stopped the driver and learned the license plate was expired and was not registered to the driver. Further investigation revealed the driver had borrowed the vehicle and replaced the tag.

A water bottle was also discovered that contained an unknown alcoholic beverage and the civilian refused a breathalyzer test. He was transported to the Provost Marshal Office, where he was placed in the D-cell because of verbal non-compliance and aggressive behavior. The subject was charged with Driving Under the Influence and Violation of the Open Container Law and released to his sponsor.

A Soldier was charged with Shoplifting after she removed the sales sticker from a ring, which she then concealed. The Soldier proceeded to the checkout line, where she paid for other items but not the ring. She was transported to the station, processed and released to her unit.

A Soldier received citations for Failing To Stop at a Posted Sign and for Operating a Vehicle With Suspended Tags. The Soldier was stopped during a routine traffic checkpoint when MPs discovered the above offenses. The South Carolina license plate affixed to the vehicle was confiscated and the vehicle was towed.

Provost Marshal Tip of the Week

SCC 56-5-5015 covers window tint (Sunscreen Devices) on passenger cars, trucks and vans operated in South Carolina. Be aware that some vendors off post will tint vehicles darker than the state law permits. However, you would still be liable for the violation of this offense. The code also states that there must be a certificate of compliance that states the percentage of tint applied.

The statute applies to all Soldiers and civilians working on Fort Jackson, regardless of which state the vehicle is registered in.

The basics of the law are:

- Sunscreening device must be non-reflective and may not be red, yellow or amber in color.
- Sunscreening device may be used on:
 - Windows immediately to the left and right of the driver no darker than 27 percent.
 - Side windows behind the driver no darker than 27 percent.
 - Rear on most window no darker than 20 percent.
 - Does not apply to “factory installed” window sunscreen devices.

Facing life’s giants

Chaplain (Capt.) Rick Cantrell
1st Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment

Numbers 13 records the account of when the Lord gave the Israelites the land of Canaan.

The Lord instructed Moses to send 12 leaders representing each tribe to explore Canaan. Once the leaders returned to Moses, Aaron and the Israelite community, they gave the following report:

The land does flow with milk and honey. The land, however, is inhabited by the Amalekities, Hittities, Jebusities, Amorites and Canaanites. They are powerful people and their cities are fortified and very large. We cannot attack them for they are stronger than we are.

Only one of the 12, Caleb, stood before the people and said, “We should go up and take possession of the land, for we can certainly do it.”

Like Caleb and the others, we too face giants. These giants can emerge in the form of everyday personal and professional challenges.

The key question is how we will face these giants when they pop up in our lives. Will we face them with fear or faith?

Caleb faced the towering giants with great confidence that God would help him defeat them. He fully believed God had provided this land for his people and the giants’ presence did not affect that truth. It is important to note that God is available and capable of helping us defeat our everyday giants, too.

Remember, “... with God all things are possible.” (Matt. 19:26b).

TSB remains team to beat in league play

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

The mid-season exhibition softball tournament is over, and the overall picture hasn't changed much. The Training Support Battalion is playing the best softball in the league and MEDDAC is trying to catch up.

After enjoying a first-round bye, TSB ran through the tournament bracket — including two wins over MEDDAC — en route to the title.

The four victories won't count in the official standings, but TSB coach Gregory Mosher feels his team is riding some positive momentum now.

"We, as a team, feel great after winning the tournament," Mosher said. "However, some of that enthusiasm is tempered by knowing that we are losing or have already lost some of our key personnel.

We do have some momentum going into the remainder of the season, but now we also have a big bull's-eye on us."

After a 5-0 shutout of the Swampfoxes, TSB whipped the Recruiting and Retention School, 18-1, setting up a showdown with second-place MEDDAC. MEDDAC was coming off tournament wins against 3rd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment and the Victory Support Battalion.

TSB's offense came to play, handing MEDDAC a 12-

5 loss and sending the Knights to the loser's bracket. MEDDAC responded by thumping VSB 12-4, setting up a rematch with TSB.

The title game was played July 18 at Hilton Field. TSB exploded in the first inning, using solid hitting and taking advantage of MEDDAC errors. Mosher, Andre Amantine, Luis Perez and Josh Briles crossed the plate for an early 4-0 lead.

The fireworks were short-lived.

The rest of the game was one of solid defense and near-misses, each squad stranding runners and missing scoring opportunities. Mosher — who made several key plays at shortstop — said his team was never comfortable with a four-run lead, knowing MEDDAC was the home team and would get the last at-bat.

"We constantly left men on base and luckily it didn't come back to haunt us," Mosher said. "MEDDAC had a great pitcher and he really worked our weaknesses."

MEDDAC threatened in the bottom of the 7th inning with two on and two out, but TSB left fielder Arthur Mohead made a diving catch on an outfield bloop to end the game.

MEDDAC coach Harry Palmer said he felt his team was the more talented team, but it pressed too hard, made too many errors, and produced too few hits. He said the Knights will be more focused for the second half of the season.

Defense against common financial fraud schemes

Felix Mason
Legal Assistance Intern

Almost every day, people are swindled out of their hard-earned money by offers that are in actuality too good to be true. The messages, Web sites and other items from these schemes are professional and look and sound legitimate.

Before sending a stranger money for an investment, make sure you are not being robbed. Here are a few common con schemes, how to spot them and what to do if you are “taken” by one of these fraudulent schemes.

What is a pyramid scheme?

Pyramid schemes are marketing and investment frauds in which an individual is offered a distributorship or franchise to market a particular product. The profit is not earned by the sale of the product but by the sale of new distributorships.

Pyramid schemes come in many forms, but one characteristic they share is that they promise consumers large profits based on recruiting others to join their program. They are not based on profits from any real investment or sale of goods to the public.

There is typically a representation that new participants can recoup their original investments by inducing two or more prospects to make the same investment, even though this is usually not the case.

Signs that the investment is a pyramid scheme:

The company running the pyramid scheme will have an incentive program that forces recruits to buy more products, at inflated prices, than they could ever sell. This practice is called inventory loading. Also look for a lack of retail sales. Many pyramid schemes will claim that their product is selling very well. Check to see if those sales are to the general public or if they are being sold to new recruits in the pyramid structure.

How to avoid a pyramid scheme:

Be careful when an opportunity to invest your money requires you to bring in subsequent investors to increase your profit or get back your initial investment. Also, check to see if the franchise or investment you are considering is legitimate by visiting the Federal Trade Commission’s Web site at www.ftc.gov.

The Commission has posted several alerts regarding pyramid schemes. You can find lists of companies in good standing with the Better Business Bureau at <http://www.bbb.org/reports.asp>.

What is a ponzi scheme?

A ponzi scheme is an investment fraud in which the operator of the scheme promises a high financial return on an investment that would not be possible though a conventional investment.

A ponzi scheme is closely related to a pyramid scheme because it revolves around continuous recruiting, but the operator of a ponzi scheme generally does not have a product at all and the operator will use the money from new recruits to pay obligations owed to longer-standing members of the program. The operator will use seminars or other methods to promise potential investors that if they invest, they will realize large profits.

Most ponzi schemes will say that they are investing money in a foreign market but instead of investing the money the operator will use the money to keep the scam going or will take the money and disappear.

How to Avoid a ponzi scheme:

Make sure that you are using due diligence in selecting where to invest money. Select investments and individuals with good reputations. Make sure you fully understand the investment before investing money. One thing to remember is that if the investment looks too good to be true, it probably is.
